2019 autumn winter series MBFW Russia Mercedes Benz Fashion Week first day

Mercedes-Benz Russian Fashion Week is held in Moscow from March 30th to April 3rd. On the first day of the official opening on March 30, thousands of spectators and fashion people came to the magnificent Manezh show next to the Red Square. Different from the past, the organizers re-planned the Manezh hall, offering dining cars, bars, stages, stands, and large screens to make it easier for visitors to watch the show.

HARRIET ECCLESTON

Harriet is an award-winning British fashion designer (Young Designer of the Midlands Fashion Awards 2017) and one of the ten designers of the Russian Global Talents Program at Mercedes-Benz Fashion Week. The collection presented today combines modern style with traditional functionality. The collection aims to show how easy it is for men's fashion to transform into women's wear. The Harriet 2019A/W series is both stylish, revolutionary and nostalgic. The mesh on the jumper and jacket is reminiscent of the fabric used in the Gillette suit, while the oversized men's shirt acts as a jacket and oversized men's trousers, turning into beautiful court pants and some Chinese print elements. In the meantime. Oversized jackets, classic shirts and neat grey vests, with a turban bow tie or a bright orange overlay on the lining add a fun and feminine detail to the collection.
